AIRPORTS DON'T MAKE NOISE!

I was sitting on the patio of a friend's house in a subdivision near the Airport. I started to hear a plane flying over. It got louder and louder and as it flew over it became quite irritating.

I could tell this plane was cruising at high RPM, at least 2500+. He was about 800 feet high. I was wondering if he had any thoughts about all the neighbors down below. I am sure he was oblivious to all those folks that were looking up at him wondering if he was some sort of flying fool.

As pilots, many times we forget about all the residents down below as we take off into these surly skies. We want to leave Earth and all its trials and tribulations and fly off into a heavenly place, so tranquil and serene. But what about all those glaring-eyed, Earthbound souls? Do we really care? Is it too much to ask ourselves to pull back that RPM and/or reduce our shadow of noise?

It is up to all of us to care about our earthbound neighbors and to fly quietly! We must remember not to advance the prop forward when landing until the last few seconds so as not to disturb others on the ground. We must try to appease our residential areas under the traffic pattern or else we will turn into airports like Santa Monica (noise restricted), Reagan National (curfews), Van Nuys (curfews), and those many others with noise restrictions.

Let's all think about our land-lovers and reduce our noise footprint.
